CEDA's FSACE programs help stabilize and support families and individuals on a path back to self-sufficiency. Services are available in communities across suburban Cook County through case management. An Intake and Assessment process is used to gather information to determine eligibility and to make informed decisions about needed programs and services. This process is also used to determine if applicants meet the requirements for case management services and to assess the applicant's readiness to engage in case management. Information from the assessment provides the basis for admission to the case management program and for assisting the applicant to develop a Family Action Plan. Approved applicants must sign a Service Agreement and present a verifiable hardship to be eligible for financial assistance services.
